The image shows a screenshot of the Chrome flags page at `chrome://flags/#autoplay-policy`. The browser's address bar and navigation icons are visible at the top. The page lists several flags, with the 'Autoplay policy' flag highlighted in yellow. A dropdown menu is open for this flag, showing four options: 'Default', 'No user gesture is required.', 'User gesture is required for cross-origin iframes.', and 'Document user activation is required.' The 'Document user activation is required.' option is currently selected and highlighted in blue. Other flags like 'Include title for the current URL in the omnibox', 'Color correct rendering', and 'Enable idle time spell checker' are also visible with their respective descriptions and 'Default' settings.

As soon as you open a video it automatically selects a quality and starts downloading the video data.. It shows Flash videos as an empty frame with a button you can click to activate it to activate to play if you want.. This can be nice for some websites and videos but it can also be frustrating or undesirable..
